grit or coarse sand. And that the ostrich will eat large pebbles is only because he is a larger bird. Similarly he will pick up a pen-knife or an iron nail or a coin or any other hard substance and convert it into a small grinding-stone. If one thinks how much bigger an ostrich is than a barn door fowl, one does not wonder at his taking rather large "grit."

The annual river-keepers' dinner of the T.A.P.S. came off at the Castle, Hampton Court, last week, and proved a very jolly gathering. Mr. Alfred Nuthall, J.P., presided, and was supported by Mr. E. Copinger (ex-mayor of Kingston), G. H. Harrison, J.P.; J. H. Gough (Thames Conservancy), Inspector Little, and several members of the T.A.P.S. committee. G. J. Roush and

GENERAL CHATTER.

When will the British policeman be shod in a manner not warranted to give warning of his approach to burglars? When lying awake the other night I could always differentiate the footsteps of a bobber from those of any other wayfarer by their louder noise. This being highly undesirable for obvious reasons, I venture to suggest to the commissioner that he should experiment with the state of the shoes.

At one of the late sales, a friend of mine picked up for a mere song a quantity of soft black silk, knowing that it would turn up useful for something or other by-and-by. The contemporary fashionably dressed condition of the braid on her black cloth gown, the happy thought struck her that she would make ruchings of the black silk to replace the braid. She carefully unpicked the braid from the bottom of the skirt, and well brushed the cloth with a damp clothes-brush; then she cut her black silk into strips a little more than a finger wide. Having joined them neatly, she cut the edges in slight points, and freed them out on a board she laid into moderately thick ruche and placed it round the bottom of the skirt where the braid had been. Quite satisfied with the result of this part of her work, she next attached the bodice to the long tabbed basques, trimmed with the braid and cut off and altered into short pointed basques defined round the edge with the black ruche. The braid, of course, was removed from the neck and wrist, and replaced by the ruche. The silk which the whole thing was finished, no one would have known it was the same gown that had been trimmed with the cream braid. The alteration of the bodice, and re-trimming with the silk ruche so completely altered its character that my friend laughingly remarked it had saved her having to

To check in some measure this annual slaughter of the innocents, I would suggest the formation of an anti-marriage cycling society or club, whose mission should be to constantly point out the enormous perils of descending into hell on wheels. The members might be permitted to dance around themselves if inclined for that exercise, but they should be called upon to subscribe a covenant pledging them to abjure all prancing festivities in which lovely woman participated.

Prince George cycled a little, I believe, during his earlier years, but did not take to the pastime so kindly as his elder brother. There was there was some chance that the Prince of Wales would bring cycling into high fashion by becoming an exponent. It was strongly recommended to him as the best possible preventive of corpulency. But after trying the remedy for a few days and finding it did not cure the ailment, he pronounced that life would not be worth living at such a price.

Osmond intends, it is stated, to smother another lot of records this year; he does not fear in the least, either, that any new champion will come to the front and snatch away his well-earned laurels. It would certainly require a phenomenal performer to do that; taking him all round, Osmond is evidently no smart Englishman that ever peddled. But they have some wonderful flyers in the States, and it is just possible that before the season is over, one of these racing Yanks will show his hind wheel to our invincible. A race of that kind would be worth going a long way to see, provided there was no loading.

My keenest recollection in regard to the first night of "Blue-Eyed Susan" at the Prince of Wales's has reference to the awful draught that was suddenly and without warning let into the lower part of the theatre towards the end of the second act. It was as if a door or window had been opened wide and the cold night air had consequently streamed in. The ladies in the stalls hastily put on their wraps, and the men hurriedly donned their overcoats. But I dare say many a bad cold, with its attendant dangers, date from that evening.

A short time since, I recorded the capture of a trout 17in. in length, in the pink condition, in a water fished by the Central Association members at Byfleet. The trout was, of course, restored to the stream. A few days since, I was surprised at the receipt of a huge package containing a splendid Jack of 17lb., taken from near the same place, in the same water. It is now in the hands of Saunders, and I hope to return it shortly to the Blue Anchor there, "beautiful for ever."

There are solid grounds for the growth of Birmingham paper about the deceptive nature of many jars and bottles in which goods are sold across the counter. The customer can only judge from the outside what quantity he will get for his money; he has no means of discovering the thickness of the glass or china until after the purchase. A friend of mine lately bought some anchovy paste in this way, and great was his indignation on ascertaining that the bottom of the jar was fully an inch thick and the sides no less than half an inch. On remonstrating with the vendor, the petty fraud, he indignantly assured that such goods are always sold "as they come from the manufacturer." So they are, no doubt, but that facts affords no sort of excuse to the vendor, whose business is to make sure that whatever he sells is what it affects to be.

was bordered at the foot with a narrow band of black astrachan. The blouse was striped from top as far as the bust with pointed bands of embroidery in jet and claret-coloured beads. It was gathered at the waist to fall over a folded band of black moussé silk, which by the way, is coming into fashion again. The full sleeves with tight-fitting wrists, have cuffs of the bead embroidery, and the same trimming went round the high neck-band. The make was simple, but the effect good.

Truly, play-going is not all pleasure. Probably a draught is the worst thing one can experience in a theatre—short of fire or panic; but there are other drawbacks, to some of which a correspondent of a daily paper has, for the thousandth time, drawn attention. One is the late-coming in of a portion of the audience; another, is the constant going in and out between the acts. Really, a limit ought to be placed to these unquestionable nuisances. The second of the two might be mitigated if there were more space between the rows of seats.

James Taylor ("Red Palmer") on Thursday week, and repeated by him at the Gresham on Tuesday last. Mr. Taylor is a humanitarian of the first water, who would abolish baiting in every form, substituting in all cases artificial baits, which he holds to be equally alluring. The paper was illustrated by some 20 life-like imitations of fish, fished with worms, &c.; and the fish must be a very cunning gourmand, one would think, for whom Mr. Taylor has not provided some irresistible delicacies, where-with successfully to beguile his sight or tempt his appetite.

According to last year's census, the population of the United Kingdom is a little short of 39,000,000. That is but a small number, truly, to rule a population of 238,000,000 in distant dependency. India now has the largest number of inhabitants, the population having increased at the rate of nearly 3,000,000 per annum since the previous census. Even England's people have grown by a million and a half, and the population of the United States has increased by more than a million and a half. Asia is to govern and protect, not to spend the many millions of people in the British colonies and other dependencies. A gigantic undertaking, indeed, at one time from which any other race than the Anglo-Saxon would flinch. It gives one a better understanding of the increase of the population of Hindostan during the last decade, equalled the whole population of the teeming isles.

MR. WHEELER.

Cleaning up is the order of the day in the cycling world; all thoughts are fixed on the coming winter, which, as they may hope, will prove so untoward as that of last year. Paraffin for running through the bearings, enamel, polishing paste, lubricating materials, and above all, elbow grease, are in strong demand, especially among those who put by their machines for the winter. No unwise were they; there has been very little decent riding since the beginning of November. The many alterations of frost and thaw utterly disintegrated the surface while the influenza demon gave warning that any misadventure they had better beware of becoming overladen.

But the late-coming is the greater annoyance of the two. Nothing could be in worse taste; yet it is usually the purchasers of the high-priced seats who are guilty of it. If these people really think that genuine genteelness would be so rude as to disturb the whole audience in the middle of an act. If they do not turn over a new leaf, managers will have to abolish numbered seats, and permit the system of "first come, first served." Then the late-comers would have literally to take back seats, and quit right too.

The sense of smell in fishes is no doubt largely developed (they certainly smell at all times), to meet with Mr. Taylor provides an imitation of the wiggling worm so perfect in appearance, touch, and odour, that it may well captivate a school of fish. At the Greenwich, a roach of lb. thus caught was shown. Without quite sharing Mr. Taylor's opinions, anglers always welcome novelties in the way of baits or tackle, and from that point of view particularly, the paper was of interest to all, and greatly pleased the societies before whom it was read.

Many Chinese tea-growers despair of ever again recovering command of the English market, the competition of India and Ceylon being too severe to be met. But John Chinaman is a fellow of infinite resources; he has discovered that the soil of his tea gardens is admirably suited for the cultivation of tobacco, and he purposes, therefore, to give India a Roland for her Oliver by manufacturing opium for himself instead of importing from Calcutta.

It is no bad plan for those who have little leisure, to entrust the overhauling, cleaning and refashioning to a repairer, taking great care to secure a respectable man. There are some great knaves in that trade—fellows who, when entrusted with a job of the sort, would be very likely to execute it in such a way as to give occasion for other repairs later on. But by pushing inquiry in the proper quarters there is little difficulty in finding an honest repairer. It is very pleasant for a rider to feel at the beginning of the season that his steed is all right in every part, and that its appearance does him no discredit.

"Blue-Ey'd Susan" is, in effect, "Blue-Ey'd Susan" translated as "barletta," the songs and choruses. The old play is very lightly altered. A Gilbertian flavour is given to Captain Crostree, and William sentenced to seven years at the West India sentenced to death; but virtually we have been brought back to the original. The new play is, I venture to think, is not "com opera." Indeed, how can you make "com opera" out of a piece which is nothing if not seriously sentimental? The truth is, "Blue-Ey'd Susan" ought to have been a burlesque, but probably Messrs. Messrs. interlarded it with too much to poach upon Mr. Burnand's territory.

I am glad to be able to report some capital taken from the good old Lea. Among these may mention that of Mr. James, who had nice jack of 12lb. from Day's. Water's son, and another angler has taken one of 5lb., and a brace of 3lb. and 4lb. same water. At St. Margaret's, Mr. G. L. Rayner and a friend last week took fifteen jack in two and a half hours, all sizeable, and in good condition (largest 5lb.), and run in one or eight other fish. It always gives me pleasure to state any good take from the river dear to all true followers of Walton.

Among the doings of the week Mr. Wright the veteran and respected secretary of the

The advantage of being able to swim a little—only for a few strokes—was strikingly illustrated the other day down Lancashire. A young couple who were sweethearts had to cross a narrow place which spanned a stream running into a lake. The young man, who was a swimmer, suddenly caught the lady's hand, and hurried her towards the stream, which swiftly carried her towards the roaring river. Fortunately, her agonised lover had the presence of mind to run round to the bank, whence he promptly plunged in and contrived to catch the poor girl, although the poor swimmer required some pluck to do that, the stream being both deep and rapid.

Truly would it be a very great convenience to a large number of young men—clerks at what not—if there were places in the City at these hours where cycles could be stabled. I think about this want a considerable time back, but it is recalled to my memory by a letter in one of the cycling papers. The main difficulty is, I understand, of a purely financial nature. Rents are so high in the central parts of London that the charge for stabling would necessarily have to be rather stiff, a very serious drawback to gentlemen who, as a rule, are not overburdened with cash. An enthusiastic suggestion that the Corporation should let P. P.'s might turn an honest shilling into a stabled unused space in the sacred edifice, but the proposal is not likely to be accepted just at present.

The observed of all observers at the Criterion, on Wednesday night, was Miss Henry Irving and her son Lawrence, who were seated in the stalls, and had familiar colloquies with the Editor and Routledge & Co. Stirling. Mr. Lawrence Irving has his father's black hair, and something of his facial expression, but he is not so like his father as his elder brother, Henry, is. The audience also included Miss Florence John and various other notabilities—Miss John being "gowned" in very taking fashion.

Second Survey stands well, as with another member he has had a good show of roach and dace from Richmond. The Silver Trout have been again to the front. Mr. Phillips weighs in five jack, scaling 34lb in all, weighing 14lb. of excellent roach. Mr. J. Kelly (V.P.C.A.), also had 15lb of roach from the upper Thames. The Caledonians have had some good shows. Mr. W. R. Turner heads the list with a roach, weighing 19lb. 9oz. in all and a roach of 10lb. 10oz. Messrs. R. Mills, J. Knock, and A. G. George were among the successful anglers, and all their fish, which included perch, tench, roach, chub, and jack, were taken from the bank.

Several letters dealing with soldiers' grievances have reached me; they will be dealt with next week, after inquiry has been made.

Many thanks, most obliging madam, the paper patterns of "a becoming cyclone costume for ladies" which you have kindly forwarded to me. As far as unenlightened judgment goes, the dress appears to meet all requirements. The being no feminine model available at the office, I pinned the paper patterns on my own garments, and was assured that the turn-out was most fascinating.

"An amusement in three acts" was the author's own description of "Major Hoppo" produced at the Vaudeville on Thursday. It is certainly a novelty in nomenclature. It suggests a sort of shorthand method of criticism which might perhaps be useful and interesting if not regarded as libellous. "Amusement in one act," a bore in two acts, "a courage in three acts," how would it be to polish off new plays in that simple manner?

I may have to say something shortly as revision of Thames bye-laws. It is a most important question, on which all anglers should keep a watchful eye.

The Piscatorial Exhibition at the Westminster Aquarium is assuming great proportions, and an enormous number of cases are now on the walls. It opens on Thursday next, 18th inst., and will, I hope,

The trim and collar skirt fitted smoothly over the hips. It was

THE WRECK ON THE SCILLY ISLANDS.

Scilly, in a fog the other morning, has been landed at Penzance from the steamship

The Times states that since the publication of the Greek stories of the most sensational character, founded, it is alleged, on the statements of members of the crew themselves, there have been considerable speculations as to their truth or falsity. The most serious suggestion is that the officers of the ship were murdered by the survivors. The story is told with much circumstantiality, it being stated that a mutiny broke out some time before the vessel struck, and that it was in the course of the mutiny—indeed, whilst the fight was going on—that the affair occurred. On the ground, which, as the bloodshed did not occur until after the accident, when, a vessel having been made for the boats, knives were drawn, and a fight for life ensued, during which the captain and officers were murdered. From statements made it is very evident that there were scenes of violence; for the three surviving Maltese alleged that the Greek crew used all endeavours to prevent their entering the boat. When questioned as to whether the knife was not used, they admitted that there was a call for "knives," but this, they say, was only to cut the boat-drift. Another story was that after the men who had been allowed ashore the rest of the boat, for some distance, but that they were threatened with the knife, and one who was clinging to the stern was struck across the hands with an iron bar, which caused him immediately to lose his hold and sink.

A MALTESE SAILOR'S ACCOUNT OF THE DISASTER.

John Balzan, one of the Maltese survivors in Cardiff, in an interview, said that the vessel left Cardif on Friday morning at 10 o'clock. Towards the close of the afternoon the fog came on, and, as it was accompanied by a heavy sea, navigation became somewhat dangerous, and the engines were eased down to half-speed. He and the other Maltese did no night watches, and consequently they were below during the evening. Early in the morning he was wakened by a violent shaking of the ship, and found that they had struck on a reef of rocks some little distance from the bottom of the vessel before the foremast, a large bow being consequently slightly elevated above the water was pouring in and rushing down into the stern, and the steamer was brought to a sudden stop. The captain was on the bridge endeavouring to direct operations, but there was a general scramble on the deck for the boats. He himself, with a number of Greeks and two of his fellow-countrymen, was the last to get into the boats.

men, got alongside the lifeboat. The three men endeavoured to protest, but they were driven from the boat, but they grumbled and refused to turn out. On being asked if any knives were used, Balzan replied that there was a call for knives, and nearly all of them had a knife, but they did not use them as far as he knew, except to cut the boat away from the ship. They began to pull away. Balzan alleges that the captain and officers and the other men were, at the time they left, trying to launch the other boat. There would have been plenty of room in the lifeboat for them, and the other men were not the ones which would hold about the ship when they had pulled some little distance they heard those who had been helped into the ship shrieking out for help, imploring them to come back to them. Then Balzan and the other Malays immediately began to "back water" and the object of putting back to rescue them but the Greeks turned on them, took them away from Balzan, and threatened what he would do with them if he did not do as he told. Although the boat was only a few yards distant from the ship, they refused to return to the boat, whatever they did not do.

in favour of an Eight Hours Bill for men. I am to say that nearly two years ago I stated, in answer to a deputation representing the workers in local mines, that I was prepared to vote for the second reading of an eight hours' bill for miners, and I think it possible that the principle of a legisla- tion in mine has, under certain circumstances, been capable of further extension. In reply to your question respecting his views as to labour representation in Parliament, Randolph Churchill desires me to say he considers such representation is at least a laudable one to the general interest. Dear sir, yours faithfully, CARL DUDLEY WOLFE."

A WHISTLING COUNT.
 Mrs. Shaw, the whistling lady, may be the correspondent's troublemaker here.

The great whistler of the fashionable of Paris and Vienna is now Count Zamoisky, a Polish nobleman, who years ago married the daughter of a Polesier. He whistled at Madame de la ville's, and was to have done so at some embassies. His whistled notes are of mourning. He whistles of death, richness and flexibility, and of warrance. He can whistle the most intricate brilliant compositions, and imitate a a nightingale, or thrush.

DEATH OF A FRENCH EXPLORER
By the arrival of a caravan from interior at the German stations in Africa we have some details of the M. Crampel, the French explorer. It seems met a band of Mussulman doers, who first attacked and massacred their column, and then, overtaking and his followers surprised and imprisoned. In compensation for the ransom of the prisoners he brought back, he was leaving the roof of a merchant store on the Zanzibar coast, the Zanzibar Islands, where the expedition laid in a stock of cigars on its return to Africa.

By JOSEPH HATTON.

from his face. "Do you mean," said the keeper, "I do," said the prince. "The must continue to keep the key." The cranny and nook were re-examined by a polished oak floor. There furniture in it beyond one or two and a single chair. It seemed impossible the coin had really fallen from the hand that it could not be found in place. After awhile the prince looking pale and despair, when a policeman away against the skirting of stood the coin as if glued to the wood was very much of its colour. "Oh, the powers," exclaimed the keeper. "ia!" "Thank God!" said the prince fervently that seemed out of proportion to the event. "My dear sir, I am deeply sorry that I should seem to doubt you. Can you forgive?" "Yes, most certainly," said the prince. "Never more scared, I assure you, never until now how circumstantial evidence has made a man for a crime of which he perfectly innocent." "Stand a little nearer please, and I will show you why anxious to be gone. You say that you hold in your hand is the coin's existence." The prince put his hat pocket and drew out its follow. "To possession of it a year ago. Ever since had a burning desire to get down the king's collection. Only last week leave my country, and what w greatest lady in the land have thought guest who, on being searched, has such an explanation as that I should offered to you—that there were coins, and that I had come to the mine with you. What you have said—" "I am bound to say, sir, not." "What should you have done should have been guided by the proper course; and I could not blame you evening, I have not seen you before. Lord Balfour, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, has appointed Samuel Waddington to be his private secretary, in the place of Mr. R. C. Heron-Maxwell, who has resigned on promotion.

Our population is increasing at the rate of about 300,000 per annum, or slightly to vary the form in which Mr. Mundella put it, that we are growing about three Birmingham every four years.

The estimated increase of the rabbit pest in the comparatively small area in the district between and around Chob and Bourke, in the western division of New South Wales, is 13,000,000.

Four years ago the United States Government planted a quantity of white fish spawn in Klamath Lake, Oregon. This year mature fish have been caught in abundance in those waters.

After due consideration, the council of the Royal British Nurses' Association, with Princess Christian at their head, have decided not to submit to a vote the proposed amendment to the Royal Charter when applying for the grant of a charter.

The authorities of Rochester Cathedral have a thoroughgoing restoration scheme on foot, and the dean and chapter of Lichfield have determined to appeal for an additional £20,000 with which to complete the restoration of the fabric under their charge.

The sum subscribed for church building and restoration in England in 1890 amounted to £1,608,228. This includes sums given for acquiring burial-grounds, endowing benefices, and building parsonages. The diocese of London heads the list with £211,745.

Collectors of income-tax seem to be putting on more pressure than usual this year. At all events, they appear to have resolved to issue the following urgent notice:—"It will be my duty to put in force the provisions of the Taxes Management Act, 1890, for the recovery of arrears of taxes."

A new Bank Act was lately passed in Cape Colony, and, under it, notes for £1, £5, £10, and £20 are to be issued. The notes have arrived at the Cape in December. The £1 notes are of the size of the American $1 note. As yet they have not been put into circulation.

Coffee grown in the Shire Highlands is taking an important place in the London market. There was a consignment of berries sold last week at the market at 10s. 6d. per cwt. Owners of coffee plantations in the Shire Highlands are thus reaping a golden harvest.

Last year the spirit-drinking classes consumed more than ever. The inland Revenue officials have compiled a statement showing that the quantity of spirits retained for consumption as beverage last year was 30,744,209 gallons as compared with 29,410,431 gallons in 1890. This was also a great increase on the consumption of the previous year.

The Flemish revived gardening in England, which had become a lost art. They taught us, almost for the first time in our history, to grow a salad. When Queen Katharine of Arragon wanted a delicacy of this sort she had to send to Flanders to buy it. Until their day, home-grown cabbages, cauliflowers, to nips, carrots, and early peas were all great wonders in this land.

Some eighty years ago several young plantations in the Forest of Dean and the New Forest were almost destroyed by a plague of mice, which was not stayed until an ingenious rat-catcher invented a system of pits into which the marauders tumbled when out foraging. Forty or fifty thousand of them were killed in this manner. It now appears that the great plague of hawthorn and oak in the border counties to some extent accounts for the rapid increase of mice there. Up till now the farmers have only combated the plague with ferrets, and without very satisfactory results. Why not try the pit cure?

The proposed new regulations affecting theatres and music halls were further discussed at Tuesday's meeting of the London County Council, when it was explained that they would apply only to buildings to be constructed in the future. An attempt was made to postpone the consideration of the question, but the regulations were ultimately passed.

A "floating debt," such as poor little Portugal enjoys, is not the sort of thing that keeps one's head above water.

There is always one drawback to the poem of five or six stanzas. It stands big chance of going into the waste basket.

Charitable appeals have been unusually plentiful this year. Altogether it has been a terribly severe winter for the rich.

One of the last survivors of the Moscow campaign of 1812 died on Tuesday at Lubeck. The old soldier, whose name was Dohne, was 105 years of age.

Heavy snowfalls have made the roads in Upper Austria, Styria, Tyrol, and Salzburg impassable. The post and railway services are interrupted in many places.

It has been remarked as a strong evidence of nature's disposition to assert itself that few women learning the violin care to use the chin-rest.

George Hanson, one of the acrobats of that name, has given up the trapeze in favour of the pulpit. He thus discards all his "vaunting ambition."

Over 30,000 meals are served in the House of Commons every session. In addition to these there is the ordinary "feast of reason" (more or less) contributed by the members.

Sir Frederick Leighton, president of the Royal Academy, has joined the art committee of the South African and International Exhibition, to be held at Kimberley.

The threepence express, which will not remain with a printing assignee to it, has been happily described as "a moving spectacle."

The command of the Queen's Edinburgh Rifle Brigade, from which the Lord Justice Clerk of Scotland is retiring, is to be given to Col. T. W. Jones, who has been for several years second in command.

Another evidence of the fact that abstinence makes the heart grow weaker. A Frenchman named Goussier, drinking at La Mairie, fell dead after two tumblers of the treacherous stuff.

There are, it is said, 156,977,373 watches in use, including, of course, several that are "resting"—on pawnbrokers' shelves. What a big field there is for busy fingers now a days!

"No one," says the Rev. Guinness Rogers of Mr. Spurgeon, "had less of the air of saintliness, but it was impossible to be long with him without feeling that you had seldom met a truer saint."

John H. L. Craig, of Atlanta, Georgia, shot and fatally wounded his brother-in-law, Theodore Flesch, who had broken into his house with an axe and was advancing on him when he fired the fatal shot.

The Speaker will give his usual full dress Parliamentary dinner to the Government on February 24th, and to the Opposition on March 9th. His levees for members of Parliament will be held on March 10th and 20th.

The Sultan has presented the German Emperor with a painting executed by an Armenian artist, and representing the arrival of his Majesty at Dolma Bagdache, outside of Constantinople, and his reception by the Sultan.

"Roberts the Devil" is the title bestowed upon a burlesque written by Mr. Campbell Rae-Brown and another for Mr. Arthur Roberts's special benefit. It is understood that the title has the express sanction of Mr. Roberts.

Something rather unusual in the way of agony column advertisements has been seen in the daily papers lately. A young lady who signs herself "Rosa" has been penning loving messages, in Latin, to one who is presumably her sweetheart. The language is dead, but the love is particularly alive.

There is said to be a lady living at Wednesbury who can easily stand on her hair, which is five feet nine inches in length. It sounds remarkable, but it is really nothing. Many other ladies can do the same thing with much shorter hair—if they fancy that sort of recreation.

Elizabeth Senior, an old woman of 78, was murdered at her home in Millburn, New Jersey, by a burglar. Her body was found early the next morning by her husband, who is a night watchman. The woman's throat was cut, and there were eleven stab wounds in her body.

What is the chief difference between hay fever and influenza? What, you give it up. Why, one often results from new mown hay, and the other often results from pneumonia. See? The manufacturer of this conundrum is understood to have fled the country.

It is stated that the Unionists are arranging a demonstration in opposition to the Liberal campaign now in progress in London. A series of meetings will shortly be held throughout the metropolis, at the instance of the National Union of Conservative Associations, and it is expected that several politicians of Cabinet rank will take part in the meetings.

An experimental train, consisting of new American buffet and drawing-room cars, was Tuesday run over the South-Eastern line to Dover. The cars, which are very commodious, are luxuriously fitted, and have all the latest improvements, including the electric light. It is understood that they will be run in connection with the continental service.

Between the 1st April and the 6th inst. the total receipts into the Exchequer amounted to £73,529,252, as compared with £74,708,540 in the corresponding period of the last financial year; and the expenditure to £75,795,427, as against £75,225,749. On the 6th inst. the Treasury balances stood at £2,238,285, and on the same date in the previous year at £4,366,768.

The action which Mr. Storey, M.P., had instituted against Duke's magistrates in connection with the Silchester case, and which was down for trial next week at Durham Assizes, will not, it is stated, be proceeded with. Mr. Storey states that the defendants have undertaken to pay his costs in the matter and a nominal sum in the name of damages.

Parisians have had something novel in the way of litigation—an action brought by a young lady against the director of the lunatic asylum of Mouldevergues for misinformation as to the death of a relative. It seems that the person who died at the asylum was no relative, though a namesake, of the young lady. The court awarded Mdlle. Rebolu £25 for the money and tears which the false alarm had caused her.

There is a story going round of a Manchester maiden who has tried the leap year process with every single Johnnie that she knows, with the result that each and every one has promised to be a brother to her! But if she has not captured a husband, she has netted enough silk dresses to keep her in respectable attire for about a century of Sundays, and she has acquired some useful knowledge about the commercial value of unloveliness.

One of the latest Yankee notions is a pocket fire-escape. This consists of a tape wound round on a reel, which is fastened to a belt running round the body under the arms. The tape is made of aluminium and steel, and is guaranteed safe enough to bet on. All one has to do with this pocket fire-escape is to fasten one end to the leg of the table and then step out of window. There is also a brace by means of which one descends by easy stages, instead of falling with the "sickening thud" beloved of the penny-a-liner.

The Thames Conservancy is about to construct a lock upon the river at Abchurch, between Oxford and the source of the stream.

Her Majesty has been pleased to approve the appointment of the Marquis of Bute, K.T., to be lord-lieutenant of the county of Bute.

Three members of the late Mr. Parnell's family—namely, Mr. John Parnell, his brother, Mrs. Parnell, his mother, and Mrs. Dickinson, his sister—were present at a Parnellite convention at Wicklow.

Col. Lyman P. French, a well-known lawyer of Boston, was found dead in his room in an hotel in that city, indicative of suicide. He had been very despondent, owing to illness and the recent death of his wife.

Mr. C. Darling, M.P., addressing his constituents at New Cross, maintained that the Government had to appeal to the country they would be bound to their past with confidence for the future.

Mr. Jesse Collings's bill for the preservation of footpaths proposes to throw upon the county councils the duty of protecting public rights of way from every form of encroachment.

A show, comprising upwards of 3,000 dogs, was opened at the Agricultural Hall, Islington. The Queen sent fifteen Pomeranians, and Princess Henry of Battenberg exhibited four other breeds.

Messrs. Raphael Tuck and Sons, Coleman-street, City, have received Her Majesty's commands to publish in facsimile her letter to the nation on the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale. Mr. J. Poynter, R.A., is designing a border for the plate.

There is said to be a peculiar religious society in Detroit who believe that human beings of to-day are to occupy heaven as angels when their souls depart to their past with confidence, and that dumb brutes on dying will be transformed into mankind.

A young woman of Troy, in the State of New York, who gave her seat in a crowded car some time ago to a crippled old gentleman, has received from him a splendid diamond necklace as an acknowledgment of her kindness.

An ancient copper mine, which was first worked 1,185 years ago, is about to be reopened. It is situated in the Japanese mountains, of undoubted authenticity, mention this mine. Its galleries and levels are, in some cases, just as they were 700 years ago.

Mr. Ernest Spencer's bill for the creation of a labour department has been backed by Sir Albert Rollit, Sir Joseph Pease, and Mr. Byron Reed. It provides that a new Minister shall be appointed, who shall be designated the "Labour Minister."

Princess Victoria Kaiula, Crown Princess of Hawaii, has just finished her course of training at a school in Northamptonshire, and her guardians are going to send her to Wellesley College to complete her education. She is a clever girl, and a favourite with all her schoolfellows.

Sir Richard Temple will move, at an early date, for the re-appointment of the committee on the Superintendence of School Teachers. The committee has a large body of evidence to consider, and it is desired that further evidence should be taken on behalf of teachers.

Sir M. Hicks-Beach, speaking at a meeting of the Chamber of Shipping, alluded to a proposition that the Government should cease any further expenditure on the Royal Navy, and pointed out that one of the purposes of that Navy was to protect our mercantile marine.

The Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince George, and the Princesses Victoria and Maud of Wales, took leave of the Queen on Tuesday, and returned to Marlborough House. They crossed over to Portsmouth on board the Albion. Princess Louise accompanied them to Trinity Pier, East Cowes, and the Marquis of Lorne to Portsmouth.

Mr. Justice Stirling has given his decision on Sir H. Isaacs's application to be removed from the list of contributors for 100 shares in the Anglo-Australian Printing Union, of which he was for some time chairman. The application was dismissed, his lordship holding that Sir Henry was rightly placed on the register of contributors.

Before the inquiring section of the Labour Commission, Mr. W. Jenkins, general manager of the Ocean Coal Company's Steam Collieries, situated in the Rhondda Valley and the neighbourhood, gave an outline of the conditions of labour in that district. He said during the last ten years the average loss of life had been one for every 190,000 tons of coal produced. Since 1890 the colliers' wages had risen from 4s. 10d. a day to 7s. 3d.

Sir John Lubbock presided at a meeting of representatives of institutions engaged in higher education in the metropolis to oppose the proposed charter to the Albert and Gresham Universities. He said the project was a crude and unfair, in direct opposition to the recommendations of the royal commission, and would injure rather than improve higher education in London. It was resolved to petition the Queen to withhold her assent from the proposed charter.

Although the German Emperor resolutely sets his face against the use of everything French, he is not averse to the use of roses from the Riviera and table on the occasion of the recent christening of Prince Leopold's child. Thirty-five thousand roses were sent to Berlin, at the cost of 15fr. per 100, but the secret of their origin was jealously guarded.

Mr. J. L. Sullivan is writing his memoirs, and he learns that his manuscript will be embellished by lyrics of his own composition. Thanks to the enterprise of the interview, we are enabled to quote a specimen of Mr. Sullivan's powers. It is the last stanza of a battle piece:—

The seventeen round was ended,
He was the victor, and he was the king;
I looked him over closely,
But I couldn't see his eye.

The authorities at the British Museum have made a saddening discovery. In what is known as the "terra cotta" room are two figures of a man and a woman (nearly life-size), which were purchased for a very high figure for genuine Etruscan work of great antiquity and truly Etruscan ugliness. It is now proved beyond reasonable doubt that the museum has been "sold" by some enterprising Italian "fakier" of antiquities, and that the figures are worth fewer shillings than the authorities gave pounds for them.

M. Achmann, according to a Transatlantic contemporary, recently saw an advertisement of a piano lesson given by a lady at the modest figure of 10s. an hour. He answered the advertisement in person, and on being asked to exhibit his accomplishments, sat down and banged through a waltz by Chopin. "That's shocking," said the lady; "you've been very badly taught." "True," replied Achmann, "but I began so late." Then he paid his fee, and left his card in the hands of the portlier instructions.

Dr. Leloir, of Paris, has settled the hitherto question right away. He says that the most obstinate cases of hiccough can be cured by pressing firmly with the superimposed thumb for from one to three minutes in the depression between the sternal and clavicular attachments of the sternomastoid muscle. Master readers, whenever you are afflicted with other engagements keep them out of the chilly night, as it were, are advised to cut this out and paste it in their hats for future reference.

Mr. Schnadhorst has been reported to have informed the Liberal leaders that he did not expect a Liberal majority of more than thirty at the next general election. "The statement is entirely devoid of truth," says Mr. Schnadhorst.

An old Crown servant has just died at Spital, near Windsor—Mrs. Mary Ann Wells, who, in her 92nd year, in her younger days, gave either to a naval and military officers or to persons in the employment of the State.

Howard Schneider, of Washington (D.C.), shot his wife and her brother, Frank Hamlin, while they were on the way to church. Hamlin was instantly killed and Mrs. Schneider was fatally wounded.

During the past few weeks several very clever thefts from post-boxes have been perpetrated in the City. It seems that a bag which stops all the letters is inserted in the box, being withdrawn with the "spoil" as soon as the postman has passed by.

"GOLDEN RULES" AND "SOUR GRAPES"

COULD mankind be ruled by scientific precepts, and were the precepts uniformly obeyed and followed, life would be rendered freer from pains and diseases, but it would become almost unbearable to most of us. If all the scientific reguions for the maintenance of health were written and published in one volume, under the title of "Golden Rules"; and if all men and women read them, few would observe them, fewer still could do so. Some would not observe anything in the world could do them good, and their own views or habits control them, not, because most of "Golden Rules" are not for them, but because they are utterly impractical as to them, so many "sour grapes." Every one could, for instance, that to live in the open air is to live in health, and hearty. It was the celebrated Benjamin Franklin who used to say, "People have been a thousand years finding out that fresh air is good for the body, but they will be another thousand finding out that it is good for them in health." But to this the ready answer is, "I am in 'sour grapes' to every sixty years, and I am a hundred. If not, as, whether I live or die, I am a hundred, and I am not in it anything but 'fresh'—in the early morning, before the sun has had time to do his sanitary beneficial work over the surface of the earth; or long at sunset, when the earth sends forth into the air all the miasmas, effluvia and evaporation, without speaking of heavy at night, storm, fog, and drenching rains. We leave our hurrying to work, or we leave the latter to rush out as the sun comes, and certainly ought, in the heat of the day, to be in the open air, in the shade, in the sun, and blood the pleasant invigorating air; but it is unfortunately true that the present-day, atmospheric hygiene does operate

BEGIN WITH THE BLOOD.

NOT one of us has quite pure blood. No, not one. The blood is purified (?) by Arsenic, Mercury, Iodides. But the mischief of it! The stomach is injured, set on an edge, the bones permeated by arsenic, constitution shaken to pieces. The remedy is as bad as the disease.

Fraser's Sulphur Tablets have no poisons in them. To injure, only simple and purifying ingredients, efficient. A child may take them with safety. More are nice to the taste.

Pure blood is a life-long delight. It is health, strength and strength, free from pimples, spots, sores.

Have pure blood internally and use a really good soap—Fraser's Sulphur Soap—externally, and you will have clear skin and a good complexion.

It is a mistake to suppose that a good skin or a complexion can be secured by Soap alone. (It cannot. A P. -Fraser's Sulphur Soap—is an invaluable aid to beauty, but the first essential is pure blood. This may be forgotten. If we can't have the blood quite pure, we must get it as pure as we can.

A man wants a clear skin and a wholesome complexion. Else if he be blotchy, pimply, or disfigured men fight shy of dealing with him. Let us use P. -Fraser's Sulphur Tablets internally and use Fraser's Soap externally.

A woman needs a good complexion, else her hair decreases and her charm to the other sex much lessens. Let the woman take Fraser's Sulphur Tablets internally and use Fraser's Sulphur Soap externally.
